SCIL Support for Fellows of the Chartered Institute of Legal Executives

The Society of Clinical Injury Lawyers (SCIL) wishes to express its unequivocal support for Fellows of the Chartered Institute of Legal Executives (CILEX) following the recent Mazur ruling. SCIL recognises the uncertainty and difficulty this situation has caused for many dedicated practitioners and considers it vital that these issues are resolved without delay.

Fellows of CILEX have long played a central and respected role within the clinical negligence community. Their route into the profession is often challenging, demanding exceptional commitment, resilience, and determination. Those qualities not only enrich the legal profession but directly benefit the injured individuals and families who rely on specialist, compassionate, and highly skilled representation.

Some of the very best lawyers practising in clinical negligence today come from the ranks of CILEX Fellows. Their contribution is significant, enduring, and deserving of admiration. SCIL firmly believes that removing barriers, restoring clarity, and securing full professional recognition for these practitioners is in the best interests of clients, the wider public, and the profession as a whole.

SCIL stands with CILEX Fellows at this pivotal moment and urges swift resolution of the difficulties arising from the Mazur decision so that these valued professionals may continue their essential work without impediment.
